For the first time in, you know, forever, I woke up not sorry I woke up.

Maybe I should give props to my immune system. But really, I think it was the sheets and the bookcases.

I have the good peeps.

Wonder Woman, as Senior Agent What Am In Charge, says it's quiet, and you're to take another day. (I say: Do your laundry. Cook. Finish that stack of Rock and Ice on the coffee table.)

She says, "Tell him to come in tomorrow for the doughnuts."

(Yes. The power has gone to her head.

Also, Duke and Mom are supposed to be back in today, sometime around 11. Maybe the shot did help after all....

...or maybe he had some bizarre tropical virus and not flu after all.

It's Duke. You never know.)

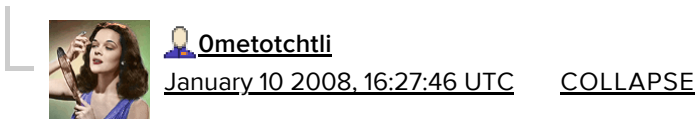

The 'zines would make me restless. But otherwise, good plan!

Wonder Woman uses this power only for good. Obviously. Doughnnuuuuuuts...

When Duke explains, pls use phone to record. (*Al*most enough to make me break discipline and come in today after all...)

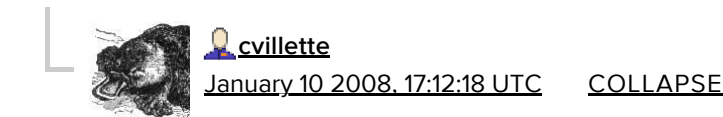

I hope somebody did the paperwork on the last two. Because they are fuzzy and scrambled in my head, and I want to read the reports to see how much of that improbable really happened.

Yeah yeah. On the server. You think WW and I just sit around all day eating bonbons?

Well, okay. We sit around all day eating bonbons. In between paperwork and trips to the firing range.

You feel up to wasting some lead tomorrow?

Shaky, sweaty. Perfect for the firing range.

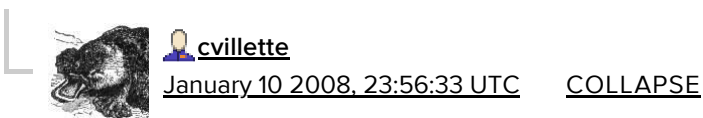

You know, these Dunkin Donuts flatbread sandwich things could be worse. They look at you shocked when you order three and a dozen Boston creme doughnuts and a large coffee then eat them all in the shop, reading the Post, though.

(I had to get out of the apartment. It was a moral imperative.)

You ate Dunkin Donuts food?

Who are you, and what did you do with Chaz?

...I like Popeye's.

And In & Out Burger.

Well. For self-abusive values of "like."

In & Out Burger is far too appropriately named.

What were they thinking?

...Okay, re reports. Which I read. Yes.

The host asked Nikki if she was his caseworker?

You think she wants to come out with us tomorrow? Because I think she needs a beer.

Oh, what am I saying? It's Wonder Woman. She has a date.

In a circumstance like that, a date doesn't occupy the same ecological niche as a beer with one's coworkers.

She might prefer the date. But it wouldn't hurt to ask about the beer.

Hey, we all have different cope.

It's true. I will ask. It will be good practice for not swallowing my tongue while talking to girls. Even if Wonder Woman \neq precisely "girl," being An Us and all.

...that probably just told you far too much about the architecture of my mind, didn't it?

Oh, why am I up?

Could it be because I've slept twelve week's worth since Sunday?

Hey, architecture!

You are a mighty eddyfisk.

That best-laid-plans thing: do they ever not gang agley, or whatever they do?

Also, Wellington said a thing, which Duke once tried to convince me originated with the road manager for the Grateful Dead, to the effect of "No battle plan survives contact with the enemy."

I though Lau was the one who was good with the next-of-kin contacts.

At least it turned out not to be one of ours.

mmm.

You notice, you went to St. Johnsbury, and two weeks later we get a go to Danville? And the thing in S.D. And the thing at Q. And now this thing.

If it's evolving I want a new fucking job.

If it's evolving, we kinda need you here, yo.

But that's okay. Because it's not evolving.
